we live in an age of persuasion leaders and institutions of every kind public and private large and small must compete in the marketplace of images and messages this has been true since the advent of mass media from broad circulation magazines and radio through the age of television and the internet yet there have been very few true geniuses at the art of mass persuasion in the last century in public relations edward bernays comes to mind in advertising most hall of famers j walter thomson david ogilvy bill bernbach bruce barton ray rubicam and others point to one individual as the father of modern advertising albert d lasker and yet lasker unlike bernays thomson ogilvy and the others remains an enigma now jeffrey cruikshank and arthur schultz having uncovered a treasure trove of lasker s papers have written a fascinating and revealing biography of one of the 20th century s most powerful intriguing and instructive figures it is no exaggeration to say that lasker created modern advertising he was the first influential proponent of reason why advertising a consumer centered approach that skillfully melded form and content and a precursor to the unique selling proposition approach that today dominates the industry more than that he was a prominent political figure champion of civil rights man of extreme wealth and hobnobber with kings and maharajahs as well as with the likes of albert einstein and eleanor roosevelt he was also a deeply troubled man who suffered mental collapses throughout his adult life though was able fight through and continue his amazing creative and productive activities into later life this is the story of a man who shaped an industry and in many ways shaped a century no artist offered a more incisive and accurate portrait of the troubled landscape of the 1970s than david bowie through his multi faceted and inventive work he encapsulated many of the social political and cultural themes that ran through this most fascinating of decades from the elusive promise of scientific progress to the persistent fear of apocalypse that stalked the globe in the man who sold the world david bowie and the 1970s cultural historian peter doggett explores the rich heritage of the artist s most productive and inspired decade and traces the way in which his music reflected and influenced the world around him the book follows his career from space oddity his dark vision of mankind s voyage into the unknown terrain of space to the scary monsters album it examines in detail his audacious creation of an alien rock star ziggy stardust and his own increasingly perilous explorations of the nature of identity and the meaning of fame against the backdrop of his family heritage of mental instability among the book s wider themes are the west

s growing sense of insecurity in the age of oil shortages and terrorism the changing nature of sexual roles as represented by bowie s pioneering adoption of a bisexual persona the emergence of a new experimental form of rock music that would leave an indelible mark on the decades to come and the changing nature of many of the world s great cities including london new york los angeles and berlin each of which played host to bowie during particularly creative periods of his career this volume is jane kirwan s second collection of poetry it is basically a conversation between two people trying to understand each other and themselves one is british the other czech and a former political prisoner here cultural historian peter doggett explores the rich heritage of the artist s most productive and inspired decade and traces the way in which his music reflected and influenced the world around him
